The girl in the photo is Minar Artin. She is twenty-three years old and comes from Syria, from a city called Qamishli. Due to the war started in 2011 in Syria, Minar and her family moved to Artsakh. Currently, Minar lives in Berdzor, Artsakh with her husband and two children. She graduated from the local school of Berdzor and got accepted to the Shushi University of Technology in the faculty of economics-accounting and audit.

Minar's father is Hakob Artin, who is an auto mechanic and a musician. Her mother is Ghada, who is currently a housewife but earlier was temporarily on the staff of Project AGAPE. Minar's brother is Karo, who was a student at the local school of Berdzor and was born in 2002. Currently, Minar's entire family lives in Germany, while Minar decided to stay and live in Artsakh.

Here in Berdzor she married Gevorg Almajyan, who is a refugee from Syria, as well, and works as a barber. They have two daughters called Emily and Nataly, the former is two years old, while the latter is two months old.

Due to the contributions made by Project AGAPE, she was allowed to pass onto the third year of her university studies for what she is very grateful for.

Minar's newborn daughter. All the things that their cute daughter has on her and around her in the picture are the things they received from Project AGAPE in the Christmas Boxes.

"I want to thank Project AGAPE for the financial aid that helped me continue my university education. Also, I thank Nara Melkonyan for spreading the word about my message and the hardships I face. I hope that God gives health and happiness to all the kind people whose contributions, both material and financial, eased my parents', my brother's, and now my own family's hardships from the first day we came to Artsakh until now. May God's blessings always be over you all, as you continue to help other families and students in need."
